The Parlor Concert Last Night. The Parlor Concert, given by the ladles

of the Episcopal church at the Rectory last evening, was one of the finest musical treated for a long time. The Rectory was crowded with persons, and everything was conducted in the most pleasing

Persons who may read this report will please bear in mind that the reporter does not lay claim to any musical talent, but merely expresses his opinion in regard to the ability of the persons who took part in the concert last evening. He has never taken lessons of any of the noted music teachers of this or any other ountry, and could not say positively whether the various pieces performed were descrying of praise or not. had be not been convinced that they were by the many compliments lavished upon the laffies by those who are versed in uch matters, but to his - uncultivated car they were musle indeed. His present alling renders it necessary that be should understand these things, and his financial condition being such as to prevent him from going to France or Germany to perfect his musical education, he has been thinking very seriously of nducing some medium to materialize the pirit of Beethoven, or some other great eacher, for his especial benefit,

The musical part of the entertainment was opened by Miss Annie Alvord, who performed the very beautiful instrumental piece, entitled, 7 The Last Rose of Summer," in a most charming man-

A vocal solo by Miss Annie Pitcher was the next on the programme, and that young lady received many compliments for her fine singing. This is not the first time we have had the pleasure of complimenting this lady upon her musical ability, but none have a stronger claim to unlse than slie;

"Falling Leaves," by Miss Aurilla Carey, calified the player to the many complimentary remarks that were passe upon her ability as a musician.

Miss Karie Alvord, who is known a one of the brightest of Cairo's young girls, then recited "The Whiskers," On one other occasion we were fortunate mough to be present when Miss Katie read one of John G. Saxe's productions, for which she was the recipient of the most flattering compliments, but in her rendition of "The Whiskers" she even surpassed her former performance.

Of Mrs. W. P. Wright, who sang the olo entitled "Darling," we can only say that she was up to her usual standard of excellence, and none were spoken of in more flattering terms than she. The "Mulligan Guards Quadrille," by Misses Annie Pitcher and Ella Robbins, was beautifully rendered. Part first of the programme was then completed by a select reading by Prof. Alvord. The professor's ability is so well-

Miss Bennie Snyder then favored the audience with a piece entitled "Last Hope," for which the listeners showered very flattering culogies upon her, all of which she rightly deserved.

He gave us to understand that he wanted the report corrected, and we herewith inform our readers that we are willing to swear that he is not dead. We got our information in regard to the hanging from the Gazette, which, it appears, was mistaken;

--We have connected with this establishment a young man named "Jim."
"Jim" is ubiquitous, and has a way of telling all he hears. This morning he told us that the report was that the busi-ness manager of a well known institution in this city was goin' to be married pretty soon. He says the lady lives in a city on
